Democratic Transition In Egypt- April 29, 2011
Bios of Participants

Omar Ashour
Omar Ashour is the Director of the Middle East Graduate Studies Program in the Institute of Arab and Islamic Studies, University of Exeter (UK). He is the author of The Deradicalization of Jihadists: Transforming Armed Islamist Movements, (London, New York: Routledge, 2009). His research areas include democratization, Islamist movements and ideologies, and terrorism and insurgency. Dr. Ashour’s published works cover the Middle East, the Caucasus, Central Asia, and Arab and Muslim Communities in the West, and they appeared in Terrorism and Political Violence, International Affairs, Studies in Conflict and Terrorism, Middle East Journal, Canadian Journal of Political Science, Journal of Conflict Studies, and other academic and policy journals. Dr. Ashour is a consultant for the United Nations and a regular contributor to media outlets including the BBC, CBC, CNN, Sky News, al-Jazeera, al-Hurra, France 24 and others. He has a Ph.D. in Political Science from McGill University in Canada and he teaches undergraduate and graduate courses on the Politics of the Middle East and North Africa, Non-Violent Islamism, Jihadism and Armed Islamism in the University of Exeter in the United Kingdom.

Joel Beinin
Joel Benin has taught Middle East history at Stanford since 1983, including a broad range of courses from the rise of Islam to the present. From 2006 to 2008 he served as Director of Middle East Studies and Professor of History at the American University in Cairo. In 2001-02 he served as president of the Middle East Studies Association of North America. He has been associated with the Middle East Research and Information Project (MERIP) since 1980, serving as an editor and contributing editor of Middle East Report. Beinin has written or edited eight books, most recently a report for the International Solidarity Center of the AFL-CIO, The Struggle for Worker Rights in Egypt (2010); Workers and Peasants in the Modern Middle East (Cambridge University Press, 2001).

Lisa Blaydes
Lisa Blaydes is an assistant professor in the Department of Political Science at Stanford University. She is also an Affiliate Faculty of CDDRL and an Academy Scholar at the Harvard Academy for International and Area Studies. Her research focuses on Comparative Politics, Middle Eastern Politics and Political Economy, and her published works include in International Organization: "Rewarding Impatience: A Bargaining and Enforcement Model of OPEC," (April 2004), "Rewarding Impatience Revisited: A Response to Goodrich," (April 2006); World Politics: "The Political Economy of Women's Support for Fundamentalist Islam," (with Drew Linzer) (July 2008); and Terrorism and Political Violence: "Ideological Reorientation and Counterterrorism: Confronting Militant Islam in Egypt," (with Lawrence Rubin) (Winter 2008). Her book Elections and Distributive Politics in Mubarak’s Egypt was published in 2011 by Cambridge University Press.
Jason Brownlee

Jason Brownlee is Associate Professor of Government at the University of Texas at Austin, where he researches and teaches about US foreign policy, Middle East politics, and democratization. His book Authoritarianism in an Age of Democratization was published by Cambridge University Press in 2007. He is completing a book on US–Egyptian relations. Professor Brownlee’s scholarship has been published or is forthcoming in the American Journal of Political Science, Comparative Political Studies, Political Science Quarterly, and other journals. His July 2007 World Politics article “Hereditary Succession in Modern Autocracies” was recognized by the Comparative Democratization section of the American Political Science Association as Best Article of that year. During the current academic year, Professor Brownlee has been a visiting fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington, DC.

Larry Diamond

Larry Diamond is a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution and at the Freeman Spogli Institute for International Studies, where he also directs the Center on Democracy, Development, and the Rule of Law, and professor by courtesy of political science and sociology. He is the founding co-editor of the Journal of Democracy and also serves as Senior Consultant (and previously was co-director) at the International Forum for Democratic Studies of the National Endowment for Democracy. His latest books are The Spirit of Democracy: The Struggle to Build Free Societies Throughout the World (Times Books, 2008), and Squandered Victory: The American Occupation and the Bungled Effort to Bring Democracy to Iraq (2005).

Shadi Hamid

Shadi Hamid is Director of Research at the Brookings Doha Center and a fellow at the Saban Center for Middle East Policy at the Brookings Institution. His research focuses on Islamist political parties and democratic reform in the Arab world. Prior to joining Brookings, he was Director of Research at the Project on Middle East Democracy (POMED) and a Hewlett Fellow at Stanford University’s Center on Democracy, Development, and the Rule of Law. He has also served as a program specialist on public diplomacy at the U.S. State Department and a Legislative Fellow at the Office of U.S. Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA). His articles have appeared in The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Atlantic, Foreign Affairs, The New Republic, The National Interest, Foreign Policy, Policy Review, Journal of Democracy, and many other publications.

Lina Khatib

Lina Khatib is the manager and co-founder of the Program on Arab Reform and Democracy at Stanford University's Center on Democracy, Development, and the Rule of Law. She is an expert on Middle East politics and media and has published widely on topics such as new media and Islamism, political media and conflict in the Arab world, and the political dynamics in Lebanon and Iran. She is currently writing a book titled Image Politics in the Middle East for IB Tauris, which examines the power struggles among states, political leaders, political parties, civil society groups, and citizens in the region, and recently led a research project on US public diplomacy towards the Arab world in the digital age. She is the author of Filming the Modern Middle East: Politics in the Cinemas of Hollywood and the Arab World (2006), and Lebanese Cinema: Imagining the Civil War and Beyond (2008).
Tarek Masoud
Tarek Masoud is an assistant professor of public policy at Harvard University’s John F. Kennedy School of Government. In 2009, Prof. Masoud was named a Carnegie Scholar by the Carnegie Corporation of New York, and was awarded the American Political Science Association's Aaron Wildavsky Award for Best Dissertation in Religion and Politics. He is also the recipient of grants and fellowships from the National Science Foundation and the Paul and Daisy Soros Foundation. Prof. Masoud holds an AB with honors from Brown and received his Ph.D in political science with distinction from Yale. He is the co-editor of Problems and Methods in the Study of Politics (Cambridge University Press, 2004) and Order, Conflict, and Violence (Cambridge, 2008), and his articles and reviews have appeared in the Journal of Democracy, Foreign Policy, and the International Journal of Middle East Studies, among others.

Ben Rowswell
Ben Rowswell is a Canadian diplomat on leave as a Visiting Scholar at CDDRL from 2010 to 2012. In his diplomatic career he has specialized in the Arab and Muslim world. He served in the Political Section of the Canadian Embassy in Egypt from 1996 to 1998, as Chargé d’Affaires in Iraq from 2003 to 2005, and as Deputy Ambassador in Kabul from 2008 to 2009. For his most recent assignment he directed the Kandahar Provincial Reconstruction Team, leading a team of more than 100 American and Canadian diplomats, aid workers, civilian police and other experts in strengthening the provincial government at the heart of the Afghan conflict. His thematic expertise is in democracy promotion, having worked for the National Democratic Institute in Iraq and founded the Democracy Unit in Canada’s foreign ministry. He is a 2011 recipient of the Palmer Prize for Diplomats awarded by the Community of Democracies, and is now leading a research project to support democracy activists in Egypt called www.cloudtostreet.org.

Hesham Sallam
Hesham Sallam is a doctoral candidate at Georgetown University’s Department of Government. His research focuses on opposition politics and economic reform under authoritarianism. Sallam is also co-editor of Jadaliyya ezine (www.jadaliyya.com). Past affiliations include the U.S. Institute of Peace, the World Security Institute, the Middle East Institute and Asharq Al-Awsat daily.

Emad El-Din Shahin
Emad El-Din Shahin is Henry R. Luce Associate Professor of Religion, Conflict and Peacebuilding at the University of Notre Dame's Kroc Institute of International Peace Studies. Shahin is a comparativist who examines the foundation for democracy and political reform within Islamic law, philosophy, and political practices. His areas of interests also include Islamic law and politics, Islamic movements in the Middle East, and democracy and political reform in Islamic societies. Before joining Notre Dame, Shahin was associate professor of political science at the American University in Cairo, visiting associate professor in the department of government at Harvard University (2006-2009), and visiting scholar in the Islamic Legal Studies Program at Harvard Law School (2006).
Samer Shehata
Samer Shehata is an Assistant Professor of Arab Politics in the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University’s Center for Contemporary Arab Studies. He has published widely in both academic and policy journals. His articles have appeared in International Journal of Middle East Studies, Current History, MERIP, Middle East Policy and as book chapters and encyclopedia articles. His book, Shop Floor Culture and Politics in Egypt, was published in 2009 by the State University of New York Press and a Middle East edition was published in 2010 by the American University in Cairo Press. He is also the editor of a forthcoming volume entitled Islamist Politics in the Middle East: Movements and Change. Dr. Shehata has been interviewed by a wide range of media has also testified before the United States Congress. He has received fellowships from the Social Science Research Council, the Ford Foundation, and the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. In 2009, he was selected as a Carnegie Scholar for his work on Islamist politics.

Samer Soliman
Samer Soliman is working as assistant professor of political economy at the American University in Cairo. He teaches development, political economy, Egyptian politics, state theory, the political economy of authoritarianism and democracy, etc. "The Autumn of Dictatorship. Fiscal crisis and political change in Egypt under Mubarak" is his latest book issued by Stanford University Press (April 2011). He has many writings on the State and development, the State and capitalism, the sectarian problem in Egypt, parliamentary elections, Islamic banking and the transition to democracy. Soliman is an activist for human rights and against religious discrimination, and a leading member of the new Egyptian Social Democratic Party.

Joshua Stacher
Joshua Stacher is an assistant professor in the Department of Political Science at Kent State University, where I teach and research Middle East politics. Prior to arriving at Kent State, he earned my doctorate from the University of St. Andrews’ School of International Relations and completed a post-doctoral fellowship in the Middle East Studies Program at Syracuse University’s Maxwell School for Citizenship. He is currently working on a book that compares institutions and co-optation to explain authoritarian adaptation in Egypt and Syria. When not working on this project, I work on Egypt’s Society of Muslim Brothers. His work has been published in Middle East Journal, Arab Studies Quarterly, African Review of Political Economy, and History Compass. Stacher is a frequent contributor to Middle East Report.